Beirut Area Again Hit By Shells

Druze and Army In Heavy Clashes Around Village

BEIRUT - Ten days after the Geneva reconciliation talks between Lebanon's factional leaders, the security situation around Beirut is again beginning to deteriorate and disputes are arising over some of the political issues that were supposed to have been solved during

For the second day in a row Monday, heavy clashes broke out between the Lebanese Army and Druze-led anti-government militiamen around the mountain village of Souk al-Gharb, the state-run

Beirut radio reported.

The fighting also spilled over for the second day into Christian East Beirut, where two artillery salvos exploded, one in a car showroom and another near a gas station, the radio said. One man was killed and another wounded by the shellfire.

The latest fighting has formed the backdrop for the first full day in Beirut of the new U.S. special Middle East envoy, Donald H. Rumsfeld, The American diplomat arrived in the Lebanese capital Sunday evening and met with Pres-ident Amin Gemayel. He held talks Monday with Prime Minister Sha-conveyed President Ronald Reagan's continued backing for Lebanese government efforts to secure a withdrawal of all foreign forces.

Meanwhile, Syrian government sources in Damascus confirmed Monday that President Hafez al-Assad was taken to the hospital Sunday night and had a successful operation for appendicitis. The illness forced him to cancel the meeting he had scheduled Monday with Mr. Gemayel.

As negotiadons to end the violent Palestinian confrontation in Tripoli continued Sunday, Mr. Arafat disclosed that his forces have been holding six captured Israeli soldiers in the area that has been under artillery fire for the last 11 days, The New York Times reported from Tripoli.

Mr. Arafat said one of the Israeli prisoners became hysterical during the shelling and that the six men were then moved "to another place that is more safe." He did not say where the Israeli soldiers, who were taken prisoner 14 months ago in eastern Lebanou, were being held.

The arrival came a day earlier than had been widely forecast by the British press, an apparent attempt to catch auti-nuclear activists camped around the base by surprise.

Over a five-year period, 464 cruise missiles and 108 Pershing-2 missiles are to be deployed in five NATO countries as a counter to Soviet SS-20 missiles unless an agreement is reached in arms talks at Geneva.

In a parliamentary statement, Mr. Heseltine said he hoped that the arrival of the first missiles would not lead to an early Soviet walkout from the talks, as Moscow has threatened it would. U.K. Arms Foe Draws Fire For Speech to Communists

LONDON — The leader of Britain's anti-nuclear movement, Monsignor Bruce Kent, has surred wide criticism by telling the country's Communist Party that it is a partner with his organization in the cause of peace. The Roman Catholic priest, general secretary of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, received a standing ovation from delegates at the British Communist Party's annual congress Sunday when he made the statement to the meeting, adding: "I do not believe that we are so very far apart on many of the major issues."

A Conservative Party politician, Sir John Biggs-Davison, who is a Roman Catholic, said that he would press the church to review Monsignor Kent's position, saying: "It is surely clear now that he is playing a political role."

Peter Cadogan, the leader of an ecological group belonging to the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, said that appearance before the Communist conference was appalling. The party's newspaper, the Morning Star, ran its story of the speech under the banner headline:

Speaking on television on Monday, Monsignor Kent dismissed recent allegations by opponents that his movement received funds from the Soviet Union. "There is no way you can say CND is pro-Soviet," he said. "It certainly isn't." He added that he himself was "certainly not a Communist."

Experts See Wheat Farmers Rejecting U.S. Incentives to Limit 1984 Harvest

Despite more than $22 billion in federal agricultural programs this year to subsidize what is probably the most productive sector of the U.S. economy, thousands of farmers find themselves in mounting financial difficulties, the victims of a combination of high production costs and interest rates and low prices for their commodities.

To combat the price-depressing surphises, the government has created annual programs to encourage planting reductions. But this year because of budgetary and political pressures to reduce agricultural costs, the administration announced a wheat program that was much less attractive financially than last year's, which produced a 20-percent reduction in planting.

Nonetheless, the 1983 wheat harvest was down only 14 percent, to 2.41 billion bushels from 2.81 billion, the record set the previous year. Kansas was by the far the largest wheat-producing state, with 19 percent of the total crop.

The complex crop-reduction programs, which involve a shifting package of rules and incentives, require a wheat farmer this year to reduce his planted acres by 30 per-thrust of his new activism in the international arena marks a departure from recent general support he has given the Reagan administration on several East-West issues.

Mr. Trudeau's arms initiative ineludes an international ban on weapons that could attack highaltitude communications and surveillance satellites, agreement to limit the mobility of any new strategic missiles and agreement by weapons builders that the capabilities of new missile systems remain mutually verifiable.

He said that the five-power nu-clear conference would not take place until after NATO begins deploying oew cruise and Pershing-2 missiles at the end of this year in Western Europe to answer a buildup of new Soviet nuclear weapons. Moscow has threatened to break off talks on limiting intermediateraoge nuclear weapons if the NATO deployment goes ahead. Any agreement that established hroad quantitative limits on war-heads or systems. Mr. Trudeau said, could form the hasis for another round of talks that could achieve overall arms reductions.

The choice of a party gathering to announce the results of his journey underscores the domestie political dimensions of Mr. Trudeau's recent activism in East-West matters. The new Conservative Party leader, Brian Mulroney, has sharply attacked Mr. Trudeau for not taking a hard enough line against Moscow.

Despite differences with President Ronald Reagan, the Trudeau government generally has support-ed U.S. policies. Mr. Trudeau promised in 1980 to retire from politics at the end of this term as prime minister, but his specific plans remain unclear. A national election is expected next spring.

Mr. Trudeau gave only sketchy details of the results of talks he held with six West European leaders during a four-day tour of their capitals last week.

The prime minister traveled to Brussels, The Hague, Paris, Rome, Bonn and London, Background briefings before Mr. Trudeau's speech emphasized that he bad found general support in the Western capitals for some or all of his initiatives.

Mr. Trudeau stressed that such a conference would not impinge on the current U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva on limiting both strategie and medium-range nuclear weapons.

He added, "Neither Britain nor France nor China need fear that their forces will be subject to restraints which do not recognize their own national interests." At the same time, he noted that while signed arms limitation pacts, such as the SALT-1 agreement, the other three nuclear powers have not.

140 SS-20s in Europe and Asia combined. This means that the number in Europe would still have to be considerably lower than 140 SS-20s, since the Russians almost certainly will want to keep some of their missiles in Asia.

Mr. Andropov also has cootinued to insist that no U.S. missiles deployed and that the Soviet Union's 140 missiles be viewed as compensation for 162 British and French missiles. The United States and its allies flatly reject these Sovi et demands, arguing that only U.S. weapons can deter a Soviet attack in Europe

U.S. officials say that the Russians have hinted informally that they might be willing to reduce even further, to about 54 missiles and 162 warheads in Europe, but still without any U.S. deployment.

Bonn Denies U.S. Envoy Intervened

BONN (AP) — The government denied Monday that the U.S. ambas-sador to Boam, Arthur F. Burns, intervened to stop approval of a 1-billion Deutsche mark ($380-million) credit request for East Germany, a Boam spokesman said.

The spokesman, Peter Boenisch, also denied that the East Berlin government had approached Bonn about receiving a new credit. He said there had been no "official contact" or "negotiations" on such a request. The West German news weekly, Der Spiegel, had quoted East German sources as saying that the credit had almost been finalized when Mr. Burns stepped in. The sources told the magazine that Chancellor Helmut Kohl backed down when Mr. Burns told him the U.S. government would find approval of the credit "very inopportune."

Casey Had Interest in Firms Tied to CIA

WASHINGTON (WP) — The CIA's director, William J. Casey, had a financial interest in several companies doing business with the CIA when he decided to put his holdings in a blind trust last July.

Some of the investments were made by his investment adviser after Mr.

Casey became director, according to CIA records produced by a lawsing under the Freedom of Information Act. The CIA, however, has refused to release details about how many of the companies in Mr. Casey's portfolio

Thorn Warns of Looming ECP aralysis

BRUSSELS (AP) — Preparations for the European Community's year-end summit are two months behind schedule, and the community will become paralyzed unless members make major progress in resolving a chronic budget disagreement in the next 20 days, Gaston Thorn, the president of the EC Commission, said Monday.

The EC could enter a "permanent budgetary crisis" if there is no progress in negotiating a package of financial and agricultural reforms before the summit Dec. 5 and 6 in Athens, Mr. Thorn said. The work to be done includes presentation of new proposals, a series of visits by Mr. Thorn to European capitals and a final foreign ministers' meeting Nov.

At a ministerial session last week in Athens, Mr. Thorn said, "The delegates did not negotiate. They just juxtaposed their statements." He said that, even if preparatory work is completed and a solution is reached at the summit, it could take up to two years for each member's parliament to ratify it. Among issues to be discussed are efforts to reduce EC farm spending, funds for social programs and a solution of Britain's demand for more direct financial benefits.

ISTANBUL (Reuters) - A Turkish military court sentenced 23 peace. activists for up to eight years in prison Monday, with added terms of internal exile, in one of the tonghest verdicts at a political trial not involving violent crime since the 1980 military coup.

The defendants, convicted of forming an organization to overthrow the state, belonged to the Turkish Peace Association. The group consisted mainly of academics, journalists, lawyers and other professionals and campaigned for disarmament. It was linked to the Soviet-backed World. Peace Council and was abolished after the coup.

Fitzgerald, a stubborn enemy of Pentagon waste, says he has spent 17 years fighting what he calls "the Calvinist argument about military spending: the belief that costs are predestined and cannot be affected by mere man."

Whether Mr. Fitzgerald is getfing anywhere is an open question. He said in an interview he was being blocked from carrying our his duties as one of the chief cost cutters for the air force and might have to seek relief in federal court.

Mr. Fitzgerald became perhaps the most famous of all Pentagon whistleblowers when he disclosed to Congress in 1969 that the price being paid for Lockheed C-SA car-... go planes had approximately don-bled over original contract esti-

ment bureaucracy over the issue of whether stringent work measure-ment standards will be applied to the corporations that supply the air force with billions of dollars worth of equipment.

Mr. Fitzgerald is not easy to intimidate. He testified recently to a House subcommittee on what he called an "upside down system of rewards and punishments" for excessive costs on inditary contracts after the Department of Defense had declined to "clear" his testimony officially.

Now he is scheduled to testify before a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee that is investigating allegations that the Pentagon tried to punish and intimidate a civilian anditor at a Florida plant of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, a leading maker of jet en-gines and a supplier of spare parts to the air force and navy.

Although his written testimony primarily describes statutes forbidding intimidation of civil servants, it has also been refused clearance, garald's staff has calculated.

Since the 1960s, Mr. Fitzgerald has been attempting to promote what is called a "should cost" pricing system for military equipment.
A central element in such a system is the employment of an industrial engineering measurement called the "standard hour." A standard hour is not a unit of chronological time. It is defined as the amount of work a trained worker

But in the largely non-competitive military industry in which contracts are constantly renegotiated, he says, very large over- heads for engineering executive and lobbying costs, as well as poor planning, greatly inflate the dollar cost of a standard hour. . Mr. Fitzgerald and his subordi-nates, known as the "attic fangties" because of their cramped quarters on the top floor of the Pentagon, say industrial statistics show that commercial businesses can turn out complex work, of high quality, at rates from slightly more than $20 a "standard hour" to about $35 a standard hour.

Air force auditors of military industries, however, have calculated that the best rate from military contractors now ranges from $95 to $3,300 a standard hour. At those rates it would take tens of thousands of dollars to build a $400 commercial relevision set, Mr. Fitz-

Boston's Have-Nots Take Initiative in Mayoral Race

BOSTON -- Southie is a neighborhood frozen in time. Hard by the sea, severed from the rest of Boston by a freeway, its wooden row houses and squat housing pro-jects overflow with Irish immigrants' grandchildren who often have nowhere else to go.

Raymond L. Flynn lives in Southie, close to the dock where his father worked as a jongshoreman. Here, Mr. Flynn's car was firebombed a few years ago and occupants of trucks fitted with megaphones cruised the streets, calling im a "nigger lover."

But today in Southie, as South Boston calls itself, hardly anyone dwells on the anti-busing riots and racial hatred of the 1970s. For in Boston, this is the year of the havenots, the year that the neighborhoods, from Southie, poor and white, to Roxbury, poor and black, have recaptured political initiative. Rose-Colored Recovery the U.S. economy, most conspicuously the unexpected plunge last month in the rate of unemployment. Were the gloomsayers just dead wrong? Yes. Is the economy out of the woods? Far from it.

A year ago, the consensus among economists forecasting for 1983 was that recovery would be sluggish. Though it has not been spectacular, recovery has been strong and steady. Last month, retail sales topped $100 billion for the first time ever. Overall, the trend has been just about normal. But there are some disturbing distortions.

First, the forecasts: What went wrong? No one could know last November that the recessioo was at that very moment hitting bottom. The country was in the depths of the worst recession since the 1930s. There were a few signs of upturn - the stock market was surging, interest rates were falling and housing starts were improving. But the recovery was not confirmed until several months later, and its start was slow.

The wreckage caused by recession was reason enough to expect a long and difficult climb back to health. All through the recession, even the most knowledgeable anthonnes had underestimated the effect of the credit squeeze. They figured that high interest rates, even if they were declining, meant slow growth. They underestimated again. Most forecasters said that the unemployment rate would not get below 10 percent this year. It is already down to 8.7 percent.

Now the distortions: Where are they? One obvious reason for the latest half-point drop in unemployment was the strong pace of hiring. But just as important was an unexpected — and still unexplained — disappearance of a half-million job seekers. They were not employed, but they were not looking for work either and thus were no longer "unemployed." Probably, they will be back.

The good news on hiring must also be set against the bad news that industry is still not investing in new plants and equipment. Apparently unsure about long-term growth prospects, and deterred by interest costs, businesses prefer to expand capacity by hiring workers who can be laid off if sales again slacken. The investment lag means American industry is not raising efficiency enough to meet the stiffer competition from foreign producers.

The main obstacle to healthy growth remains the federal deficit. Continued inaction on the deficit now means inaction until after next November's election and probably until mid-1985. And by then the recovery could have been choked off.

The good news only encourages pobticians to take a high-risk gamble with the nation's welfare. It is shortsighted. It is dangerous. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Cars and Caterpillars

The purpose of the domestic content bill, its authors say, is to protect American jobs. The bill would require imported cars to have U.S.made components in proportion to the number of cars that the manufacturer sells in the United States. To continue its sales at the present level, for example, Toyota would have to produce 67.5 percent of its cars' value here.

When the House of Representatives passed the bill again last week, it did not really expect it to be enacted. In the unlikely event that it gets through the Senate, President Reagan is sure to veto it. The purpose of the bill's sponsors - and of the United Auto Workers, who vigorously lobbied for it - was to force protection for the auto industry onto the list of issues in the presidential election campaign.

To see what is wrong with a domestic content bill, consider the case of the Caterpillar Tractor Co. Caterpillar is one of the leading U.S. exporters. It sells nearly half of its American production abroad. Last year that came to $2.5 billion worth of U.S.-built tractors, construction equipment and engines. Caterpillar has 44,000 employees in the United States most of the production workers, incidentally, represented by the United Auto Workers.

People opposing the domestic content bill have pointed out that other countries might retaliate by shutting out American goods. That is true, but that would be only the beginning. Caterpillar does not sell many tractors in Japan. But its chief competitor throughout the world is a Japanese company called Komatsu. If the United States reduced its imports by law, the exchange rate of the dollar would rise higher than ever, making Caterpillar tractors more expensive abroad in relation to Komatsus, and costing Caterpillar sales in other countries whether they retaliated or not. Some of the congressmen supporting the domestic content bill did not seem to realize that the United States exports more machinery than it imports. Last year it imported $73 billion worth of machinery, including cars. It exported $87 billion worth - and 1982 was a bad year for U.S. exports.

Protectionist legislation does not save American jobs. It only redistributes them, usually with a net loss. The domestic content bill could save some jobs, at least temporarily, in the automobile industry. But it would save them only by destroying the jobs of other Americans, often represented by the same unions, in similar but more competitive industries. That is a reality to which presidential candidates might want to give a few minutes' thought before committing themselves to the protectionists' cause.

Syria and Mideast Tension

Syria is not the cause of tension in the region. Syria is on the defensive, particularly since the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The policy of the United States in Lebanon ... raises the tension in the region. We are just reacting to a series of threats and warnings, whether by the Israelis or by the Americans.

The impression that we are preparing for war is wrong. Our determination to equip ourselves with sophisticated weapons is to defend ourselves against any possible aggression by Israel . . . not to wage war.

We have heard from some American officials that they acknowledge our interests and influence in Lebanon and the region. Unfortunately, this is not translated into reality. Instead, we hear accusations, warnings, threats. - Faruk al-Sharaa, Syrian minister of state for foreign offairs, interviewed in Newsweek.

The Ailing Soviet Leader

Western analysts now believe that Yuri Andropov is seriously ill — probably with a kidney disorder — and that the political infighting to succeed him may be under way.

This is fascinating stuff. But it is also cause for worry, because it presumably prolongs the leadership crisis of the world's other great nuclear power.

The regime headed by Mr. Andropov has steadily grown more intransigent. The propaganda attacks on Ronald Reagan, with whom the Kremlin may have to deal for five more years, far surpass in plain viciousness anything that the U.S. president has had to say about Mr. Andropov and his colleagues.

In the view of most Western experts, all this is not necessarily Mr. Andropov's fault; it may be that he has merely been unable to crack the stranglehold of the hureaucracy — especially the military bureaucracy. Mr. Andropov reportedly won his bid for supreme power with the backing of the Soviet military-industrial complex. There is an impression that the Soviet military, always influential, now has a virtu-al veto power over important policy decisions. Present speculation is that Mr. Andropov's illness is not serious enough to force early retirement. But if a struggle for succession is indeed under way, Soviet policies probably will remain on existing tracks.

There is nothing that the United States can the Soviet Union. But Mr. Reagan and his advisers should be mindful of the extreme importance of leaving some bridges unburned U.S.-Soviet relations. If the turn of the wheel produces opportunities for more cooperation and less confrontation. Washington should be ready to do its part.

A Battalion to Costa Rica

Although U.S. troops have been moving in and out of Central America since Spanish rule ended, the dispatch of a battalion of U.S. Army engineers to Costa Rica is of a different order of significance. The increase in Nicara-guan armed power and the involvement of Cubans. East Germans, Bulgarians and North Koreans there has alarmed Costa Ricans.

The need for outside insurance against the possibility of invasion from Nicaragua, disguised as or spearheaded by a "popular upris-ing," is now recognized in official circles. Until now, Costa Rica has avoided any involvement in joint military planning with its Central American neighbors, with Panama and with the United States.

Now, permission for a U.S. Army engineering haitalion to undertake familiarization exercises in the region bordering on Nicaragua together with the Costa Rican civil guard constitutes a vast leap in commitment. This coincides with the aftermath of Grenada, which President Reagan believes signifies a change in America's mood, heralding a counteroffensive against communist expans

Is America's 'Quiet Diplomacy' on Rights Too Quiet? In Seoul, a Mixed Picture

By Hurst Hannum

WASHINGTON — 1 recently visited South Korea on a weeklong fact-finding mission on behalf of the International Human Rights Law Group and the International League for Human Rights. The trip confirmed that the mechanisms of repression that were established by esident Chun Doo Hwan in 1980 and 1981 are still in place:

Approximately 300 politicians remain banned from engaging in po-litical activity; the estimates of political prisoners (mostly students) range from 400 to more than 1,000; trade unions have been all but abolished; and "self-censorship" of the press continues to prevent meaningful public political debate. The memories of Mr. Chun's violent rise to power — and the 1980 Kwangju killings by the South Ko-rean Army, in which hundreds of demonstrators died - are not forgotten. The very legitimacy of the Chun government is now being questioned by many South Koreans. However, the picture is not alto-gether bleak. Although many observers minimize the importance of the government's release in August of more than 100 political prisoners and the lifting of the ban on political activity for a similar number of politicians, neither action should be discounted entirely. It appears certain that the political ban will be lifted for more politicians, although the true test will be whether it includes such prominent figures as Kim Young Sam or the exiled Kim Dae Jung. Additional releases of prisoners also seem likely.

The South Korean press gave wide coverage to calls by the government-influenced opposition in the National Assembly for the release of political prisoners, the direct election of the president and an end to restrictions on the press. Student demonstrations, which apparently involved a number of arrests and injuries, went unreported at the same time. And although a wave of short-term arrests and detentions (particularly of students) followed the assassination of several highranking South Korean officials in Burma — and a number of dissidents reportedly were placed under house arrest during President Reagan's just-ended visit - oo major crackdown on political opponents has vet occurred

The weeks following the Reagan visit will be critical in determining whether this relative restraint will continue. There is cause for minimal optimism. The people who insist that numbers have little to do with the basically repressive nature of the state are correct. But a refusal to acknowledge even small progress is unlikely to lead to the peaceful transition that everyone claims to want.

Mr. Chun's frequent travels, the recent Inter-Parliamentary Union meeting in Seoul, South Korea's hosting of the Asian Games in 1986 and the Summer Olympic Games in 1988 are evidence of the regime's search for international legitimacy and respectability. But this increased international attention poses a dilemma for a government that promises democratic reforms but has yet to deliver anything

Mr. Alfonsin believes that President Jimmy Carter's human rights policy saved thousands of lives m Argentina. It is even possible that he owes his own life to the unsilent diplomacy of Mr. Carter's human rights team in the State Department during the three years after the mili-tary coup of March 1976 — years in which at least 6,000 people were abducted, routinely toruned and secretly murdered by the military.

Mr. Alfonsin was one of the few political leaders to speak out during those dangerous years and was the only one to play an active role in a tiny human rights commission com-posed almost entirely of relatives of victims of the military's repression. Mr. Alfonsin will never forget the Still, this is a chance for the Reagan administration to demonstrate its commitment to democracy. A truly democratic government has emerged from the ruins of an appalland authoritarian regime. An Urgent and Intimidating Agenda for Those Elected in 1984

WASHINGTON — A year from now, we will know the identifies of the people who will lead the government of the United States through the rest of the 1980s. The president and vice president who will serve until 1989, the senators who will serve until 1991, and the representatives who will serve until 1987 will have been elected.

As one looks at the year ahead, what becomes clear is the work that will be waiting for those men and women. The agenda is intimidating enough that one wonders why they will spend the next 12 months vying for the right to shoulder that burden.

Even if the recovery continues unbroken, the next Congress and administration will face deficits in this decade dwarfing anything in the country's previous peacetime history. The fed-eral budget deficit will start at an annual level closer to $200 billion than to $100 billion. Bringing the deficit down will require political-ly painful choices in trimming military spending. Social Security, Medicare and domestic program growth — and in raising taxes.

Without those painful decisions, however, chances are that the nation will face interest rates so high as to damage credit-sensitive secBy David S. Broder quently tortured in barbaric fash- important first step toward a new tors of the economy, distorting the terms of trade. This will damage the ability to export and will, in effect, subsidize imports that cost American jobs and profits. That will be part of a major trade policy fight. The time is soon coming when the govern-ment will have to face a critical choice: Shall the United States continue to exert its influence in an uphill battle for a more open international trading system, or shall it join most of its trading partners in restricting access to domes-ne markets while subsidizing foreign exports? Closely related to the trade question are the issues of industrial and agricultural policy. Does the government have a role to play in preserving the smokestack industries and their jobs? Should it try to steer capital into hightechnology industries of the future? Can politicians and bureaucrats be trusted to decide between winners and losers in industry? Can Americans afford to risk their future on compenition between private American companies and consortiums made up of foreign governments and businesses?

Farm policy presents similar dilemmas. For years, the United States has vacillated between full production policies, dependent on foreign markets, and policies of crop control and price subsidy, geared to domestic economic and po-litical needs. The inconsistency has brought its own costs, and a choice of direction cannot be delayed much longer.

And there will be at least five other economic sues that demand attention in the '80s. The country is witnessing an accelerating shift of people, jobs, resources and capital from state to state and region to region, creating severe problems of growth and decline. There is no settled national policy on attempting to shape that movement, so as to lessen the human and governmental costs.

For two decades, the country has postponed major national investments in the capital infra-structure. The repair bill for needed improvements in the transportation, reclamation, sani-tation and anti-pollution systems is almost as great as the national debt - and even more pressing. Every bit as important are the unmet needs of education. The debate on education, fortunately, is under way. But it is still barely

How to achieve quality in education while pre-serving equity and how to decide which level of be settled. cal will pay the bills for this are still to One must add the immigration policy question to this list, for it has a major impact on the future of the job market. Beyond that; U.S. border policy will define America's sovereignty as a nation, Americans' self-image as a people and their ties to the countries to the south.

Finally, there is, as always, the issue of the poor, made urgent by the recent growth of that population after almost two decades of progress in reducing their numbers. Almost alone mong the advanced nations, the United States lacks a national income-support program. Can it wait another decade?

Simply to list these issues is to remember that much has been left undone by the divided government that has opened the '80s. Those chosen to govern next year will have fewer excuses and less time. The Washington Post

U.S. officials in the region suggested that the intervention could encourage peace talks by scaring Nicaragua's Sandinist government and encouraging it to make concessions in the Contadora process.

The Contadora group's principal goal is considered to be a settlement between Nicaragua and the more conservative governments of Honduras, Costa Rica, El Salvador and Guatemala

In a sign of progress last month those five governments endorsed in principle a Contadora document calling for sweeping steps to damp-en the region's conflicts. The proposal would require each country to halt any support for rebels in other countries, reduce arms stockpiles and foreign military advisers and promote internal democracy.

At a Contadora meeting in Panama beginning Thursday, the countries will start the much more difficult task of determining how to put this document into effect.

The Grenadian intervention was viewed as likely to harden the positions of the four conservative governments, particularly Honduras. Senior Honduran military officers have said in the past that they doubted a negotiated settlement was possible with neighboring Nicaragua, and some envoys think the Hoodurans are aching for some provocative action by Managua that would justify a request for direct U.S. intervention against the

French Right Wins 5th Straight Town In By-Elections

United Press International

PARIS — France's rightist op-position has scored its fifth successive victory in municipal by-elec-tions and has ended the Communist Party's 18-year tenure in a working-class suburb of Paris.

The list headed by Jean-Clande Abrioux of the neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic easily won control Sunday of the town council of Aulnay-sous-Bois, collecting more than 54 percent of the vote. Mr. Abrioux's list had opened a lead over the Communist mayor, Pierre Thomas, in the first round of voting the previous week. He appeared to have won with help from voters who had supported the extreme rightist National Front.

The municipality was one of six in which leftist victories in nationwide local elections last March were annulled after courts found evidence of vote rigging.
The Socialist-Communist

erning alliance has lost five of the six by-elections that were called after the irregularities were found. In addition to Aulnay-sous-Bois, in Paris's northern suburbs, they are Dreux, in the west; Antony and Villneuve-Saint-Georges, in the south, and Sarcelles, in the north.

Communist Resigns Post As Head of French Mines

By Paul Lewis

New York Times Service PARIS - The Communist head of France's state-owned coal mines resigned Monday to protest gov-ernment cuts in coal production. The cuts are being forced on the Socialist-led coalition government by the threat of an expensive energy glut brought about by economie ession and France's ambitious drive to reduce its dependence on

Georges Valbon, a member of the Communist Party Central Committee whom the Socialists appointed two years ago to run the mining group Charbonnages de France, said he was leaving because government policy on coal no longer corresponds to the concep-tion I have of the mission I was

He was referring to the Socialists' decision to freeze next year's subsidy to the coal-mining industry at this year's level of 6.5 billion francs (about $800 million), which means production will fall slightly below this year's expected produc-tion of 15 million tons. Before taking office, the Socialists, with strong Communist support, pledged to increase coal production to 30 million tons a year.

The Communists have become increasingly unhappy with the aus-terity policy the Socialists are fol-

In his resignation letter, Mr. Val-bon said the draft budget for 1984 "can only lead to a programmed decline of national production, to the closure of mines which should and could remain active, to fewer jobs for miners and to a deteriora tion of the economie situation of the coal-producing regions."

French government planners warned last summer that slow economie growth and improvement in conservation meant the country was heading for a serious energy glut by the end of the next decade. Some sources said coal production would be allowed to fall to 10 million or 12 million tons a year, implying a big increase in unem-ployment in mining areas.

According to some estimates, French coal mines would have needed 10 billion to 12 billion francs next year to start increasing production as the government pledged. This amount is close to the 14 billion francs the Socialists plan to spend on aiding the rest of the

Tarkovsky's 'Boris' Underlines Producer

By Henry Pleasants International Herald Tribune

ONDON — Events of the last week or so have underlined if any underlining were necessary
— the extent to which the present, in operatic history, takes its place as the Age of the Producer.

And they have illustrated nicely the dichotomy represented by those producers who feel impelled to update the masterpieces by alteration of period and setting and those, on the other hand, who feel that there is something to be said for putting on a work exactly as its musical and literary creators imagined and conceived it.

The "progressives," following in the footsteps of Walter Felsenstein and Gotz Friedrich in Berlin and Wieland Wagner and Patrice Cherean in Bayreuth, have had their say in David Pountney's new "The Vallyrie" for the English National Opera at the Collection and a new "Das Rheingold" by Göran Järvefelt for the Welsh National Opera in Cardiff.

Period authenticity was the objective of Jonathan Miller's tele-vised "Beggar's Opera" for BBC-TV, and somewhere in the middle, but closer to the conservative position, is a new "Botis Godinov" produced for the Royal Opera by the Soviet film director Andrei Tarkovsky, his first venture into opera. It certainly will not be his last, for this "Boris," of all these new productions, has been the most satsfactory, has given the most operatic pleasure, and gained the most wholehearted popular and critical approval.

This success has been greatly assisted by abandonment of Rimsky-Korsakov's original in an edition by David Lloyd-Jones, the musical rection in the inspired hands of Clandio Abbado, and by a very petition among 20 or more films strong cast headed by the English with Golden Eagle awards for best bass-baritone Robert Lloyd, taking on Boris for the first time and mak-

Tarkovsky, in this first operatic venture, is also beset by the failing common to those who come to opera from theater or cinema, of not knowing when to leave well enough alone, of underestimating music as a helpmate in achieving dramatic and theatrical objectives. But all m all, a notable success.

It might be a greater success if it were not so long (it runs to almost four hours with a single half-hour intermission):

Wagner has fared less well in these recent productions. In "The Valkyrie," Pountney, who last season had the notion of staging Dvo-rak's "Rusalka" in a child's nursery, transforms Hunding's forest hut into a rural baronial hall and Valhalla mto an enormous Edwardian library with circular staircase, from the top of which Wotan, in dressing gown, looks down upon a slowly revolving Earth, while at Cardiff, according to David Carms in the Sunday Times, "the fashionable assumption that because the gods are ruthlessly self-seeking and corrupt, they must be shown as laughably effete is carried to absurd lengths." When are those responsible for the conduct of opera houses going to say that too much is more than enough, and put an end to this sort of presumptuous operatic mischief?

Jonathan Miller's richly Hogarthian "Beggar's Opera," with its 60-odd ballads restored to their original Johann Pepusch harmonization by Jeremy Barlow, and accompanied by baroque instruments under the direction of John Eliot. Gardiner, was very well performed by all concerned —although Roger Daltrey, lead singer of The Who, as Macheath, was more rake than rounder — but it tended to sink under the weight of its own authenticity, not to mention the weight of all those ballads and the weight and mass of its own authentic furniture.

Nancy Banks-Smith, in The Guardian, noted that Dr. Miller is returning to medicine, or at least to quantities of finkins, bodkins, kilsian people, in other words, the on it, several sacks of real oakum, and no forwarding address."

Market Analysts Are Saying That Price In Week Of Gold Has Reached or Is Near Bottom

Piew YORK — The price of gold bullion finally rose last week, after plunging for six straight weeks. While spot gold gained only $3.90 an ounce, to $384.10, the consensus among market analysis is that if the bottom has not been reached, then it is close at hand.

But didn't they also hold that view during the six-week decline that pulled bullion prices down from $420 to as low as $375? Yes, according to Sinclair & Co., whose metals specialists explained why even bullish traders had joined the sellers during the recent decline by quoting a Will Rogers observation on market behavior: "Even if you're on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there."

Another expert, Charles R. Stahl, publisher of Green's Commodity Market Comments, said. Sunday in a telephone interview from Princeton, New Jersey. "In following gold for 40 years I have never seen anyone pick a market-bottom. No market ever looks good when it hits bottom. But now most rechnical and fundamental indicators are signaling that the next important move will be up, even if there is a short-term decline to the current support level of

The flow of scrap gold to refiners has all but dried up in recent weeks. It was such scrap sales that helped break the gold market in 1980.

Jeffrey A. Nichols, metals-mar-ket research director at J. Aron & Co., a major metals dealer and subsidiary of Goldman, Sachs & Co., also firmly believes that the next

"All commodity prices are not only a result of trends in supply and demand but, in turn, are a major influence on the evolution of supply and demand. Looking at the results of the recent decline in gold, we see significant bullish developments already taking place in the gold and silver markets," Mr. Nichols said Friday.

Specifically, the supply picture shows that the flow of scrap gold to refiners has all but dried up in recent weeks. It was such scrap sales that helped break the gold market in 1980, Mr. Nichols said. "Indeed, in 1980 such secondary supplies of salver exceeded new mine production."

Producers Retaining Supplies

Not only are individuals unwilling to part with gold at current prices, but precious metals producers are too. Much of the primary source of gold and most of silver comes as a byproduct of copper mining. Many mining companies are stockpiling their precious metals rather than accept current prices.

Moreyer, many of the United States' copper and other base-metal mines have either closed or have reduced activity because of the surplus of cheap foreign supplies or lack of domestic industrial demand.

On the demand side, individual investors in the United States and on the demand side, individual investors in the United States and abroad continue to follow their practice of increasing purchases of bullion coins and bars whenever the price of gold declines. Sales of South African Krugerrands are typical of this phenomenon. In September, Krugerrand sales totaled 275,000 ounces (7,734 kilograms) worldwide, Last month, as gold prices tumbled, the sales soared to 379,000 ounces.

In fact, Mr. Nichols points out, in the first 10 months of 1983, a time when gold prices fell roughly 10 percent, Krugerrand sales climbed 39 percent to 3.9 million ounces, which was 14 percent more than total sales for 1982. Sales of other bullion coins showed smaller but still impressive increases, he said.

Strong Japanese Reaction

Nowhere does the demand for gold increase so sharply with the drop in price as in Japan. Last September, Japanese imports of gold totaled 257,000 ounces. In October, when prices plunged, the imports jumped to Hoarders are not the main reason for the increased demand for gold during periods of falling prices, Mr. Nichols command: "Every time our economy recovers from a recession, demand for gold jewelry rises and today is no exception. With this in mind, jewelry manufacturers have seized upon the recent decline in prices to stockpile gold."

What about the impact of high interest rates on builton? This is one of the major negative "technical factors" that have kept a lid on gold prices. he replied, adding that high rates are still having that effect. As long as investors can get a high real return on money-market and other "paper investments," gold will not be attractive to them.

But if the real returns (investment yields less the inflation rate) should decline, then investors will join the gold hoarders in putting a portion of their savings into bullion. Today, returns on money-market funds exceed the inflation rate by about four percentage points:

Thus the demand for gold will continue to come mostly from jewelry. and other industrial users, long-term hoarders and those in foreign countries with rapidly depreciating paper-currency values. ... New York-Times Service

Fed Says M-1 Fell

NEW YORK - The parrowesi measure of the U.S. money supply, known as M-1, fell $2.5 billion to below the Fed's growth targets, but prospects of lower interest rates are dampened by the still strong ecoomic recovery.

The broader measure called M-2 rose $16 billion in October, for a month-to-month growth of 9 per-cent, comfortably within the Fed-eral Reserve's annual growth target of 7-10 percent. The targets for M-1 are 5-9 percent and the latest week brings month-to-month growth be-

Nigeria's Test of Wills With the IMF

Shagari Is Ruling Out A Currency Devaluation

By Pranay Gupte

International Herald Tribane LAGOS — President Shehu Shagari, having persuaded the electorate to keep him in power, is: now turning his persuasive powers on the Interna-tional Monetary Fund, which is pressing him to devalue the country's currency as a condition for receiving IMF help.

But President Shagari, sworn in a few days ago for a second four-year term, takes strong exception to the IMF view that a devaluation is crucial to reducing the balance-of-payments deficit of Nigeria, whose dependence on oil proved disastrous as world petroleum prices slumped. In an interview Friday, President Shagari ruled out a devaluation, saying, "I don't see what we will gain by devaluation in Nigeria."

"The IMF takes it as a general policy to recommend devaluation. We are still trying to persuade them to see our side, And I believe they will understand us," be said. "I am very hopeful we will come to terms with the IMF soon, either toward the end of this year or early next year."

President Shagari's remarks come at a time when his financial advisers are not only negotiating with the IMF for $2 billion to $3 billion in credits but are also asking a consortium of banks to reschedule about $2 billion in overdue shortterm trade debts to major foreign suppliers.

A team of Nigerian officials that visited Europe last week was scheduled to return to Lagos Tuesday accompanied by representatives of the government's three major financial advisers, S.G. Warburg & Co., Lehman Kuhn Loeb and Lazard Frères. Nigeria has already agreed with about 30 Western banks on rescheduling nearly $2 billion in arrears owed them on confirmed letters of credit. This effectively rolls over the trade debt and converts it into a loan

Nigeria's trade debis are estimated at about $5 billion, though bankers and foreign officials fre-quently complain that in dealing with Nigeria they are hampered by a lack of precise figures. Overall debt is said to be about $14 billion.

Major international banks have made it plain they want to see the Shagari government reach an accord with the IMF before considering new commercial credit of any significance.

International Revald Telepoor LONDON - Mercury Securities, the parent company of the merchant bank S.G. Warburg & Co., disclosed Monday it plans to buy 29.9 percent of Britain's sec-end-largest stockjobber, Akroyd &

The plan is another sign that British securities firms are scrambling for new partners to cope with tougher compension.

Mercury and Akroyd said that they hoped to disclose terms of the plan Thursday but must await ap-proval from the London Stock Exchange. Trading in Akroyd's shares was suspended Monday morning. They last changed hands at 585 pence apiece, giving Akroyd a mar-ket value of 293.6 million ($140

but declined to comment on the current status of those discussions. "Things are changing even more rapidly than people in the City had expected," said Tony Lewis, chairman of Smith.

The changes reflect the stock exchange's plan to phase out minimum commissions. Elf Expects a Heavy Loss From Its Chemicals Units al Herald Tribune PARIS - Michel Pecqueur, the hairman of Elf-Aquitaine, said Monday that the company has begun a reorganization and investment program to make its ailing chemical activities profitable by the end of 1986.

The group's loss from its chemi-cals businesses this year will total 1.2 billion francs ($148.3 million), Mr. Pecqueur and other Elf execu-tives said at a news conference. They added that the losses were consolidated for the first time and were primarily from operations in France. Elf's carnings for 1983 are expected to be about the same as last year's 3.52 billion francs. Sales of the state-controlled group were projected to rise to 130 billion to 135 billion francs in 1983 from 118.3 billion francs in 1982, Mr. Pecqueur said. Chemicals. including heavy-organic, specialty and pharmaceutical products, are expected to account for 42 billion francs in sales in 1983, according to

But the banker added that the amount already committed would probably be enough to pursuade Mr. de Larosière to recommend to the IMF's executive committee Friday that disbursements from the fund's own $5.4-billion loan package be resumed. They were suspended in June, when Brazil was found out of compliance with the IMF economic-adjustment plan. As bankers had predicted when the new loan was announced in late September, given the size of the loan, the number of banks involved and the magnitude of Brazil's foreign debt, raising the money has by

The drive to get more banks to join the new package is över.

During the next few weeks, pressure on banks that have not yet responded to the loan request will intensify, and many bankers are predicting that the total could rise to $5.5 billion to $6 billion. The remaining $500 million is likely to be difficult to get.

In spite of initial reluctance, the lack of an alternative, and a belief in Brazil's long-term potential, have persuaded most banks to par-

Japan Air Lines Reports Profit in Half In Contrast to Deficit a Year Earlier

TOKYO (AP) - Japan Air Lines said Monday its unconsolidated profit for the six months ended Sept. 30 totaled 3.23 billion yen ($13.7 million), in contrast to a loss of 3.143 billion yen a year earlier. Japan's national flag-carrier said its finances were beloed by a 4.7percent decrease in operating expenses because of the decline in fuel

Revenue, however, fell 0.5 percent to 384.02 billion yen from 385.92 billioo yen, bercause of a 2.4-percent decline in the oumber of passengers on domestic routes and a 3.1-percent drop on international flights.

Japan Air. 37.7 percent of which is owned by the Finance Ministry, blamed the passenger decline on increasing competition among airlines on international routes. It specifically pointed to new flights begun by United Air Lines and Philippine Air Lines on Pacific routes.

GE to Keep Stake in Coal Properties

MELBOURNE (Reuters) - General Electric Co. of the United States is to retain a 20-to-25-percent stake in Utah International Inc.'s Queensland coal properties and take a similar stake in Broken Hill Proprietary Co.'s Gregory coal mine, GE and BHP said Monday. The announcement came in a revised agreement for the acquisition from GE of Utah by a group led by BHP, the two companies said.

The announcement said the new agreement establishes a firm basis for ompleting the transaction in April 1984.

"The proposed $2.4-billion purchase price is to be adjusted for the value of the property to be retained by GE. BHP is to retain the remaining 75 percent of its holding in the Gregory mine, and the group is to hold 40 percent of Utah's Queensland coal properties.

Occidental Petroleum Corp. to Sell Unit

NEW YORK (Reuters) - Occidential Petroleum Corp. said Monday that it signed a definitive agreement to sell its Permian Corp. subsidiary to Wesray Operations Inc., an affiliate of Wesray Corp.

"The sale price is to be $250 million in cash, a promissory note for a further $75 million, cash from the sale of existing crude-oil inventory valued at about $50 million and a warrant to buy 7.5 percent of the stock of Wesray Operations, Occidental said.

Occidential added that it would retain certain of Permian's assets and liabilities. The cash will be used to reduce Occidential's obligations incurred in acquiring Cities Service Co., Occidental said.

Fall in W. German Exports Said to End

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — The decline in West German exports may have bottomed out, but lasting export recovery will only come with stronger worldwide growth in demand for capital goods, Deutsche Bank said Monday in its latest economic report.

An inflation-adjusted 3-percent growth in industrial orders for July to September compared with the previous three months shows the West German recovery will continue into this quarter, it said.

So far demand for capital goods has been isolated. Although domestic demand showed little movement from the middle of the year, foreign

. TOKYO (AP) — Mitsubishi Motors Corp. said Monday that an unfavorable yen-dollar exchange rate, higher labor costs and lower gassenger-car sales contributed to a 52-percent decline in its profit for the first half of its fiscal year. The company said its profit for the six months ended Sept. 30 was 3.88 billion yen ($16.6 million), down from 8.11 billion yen a year earlier. Revenue rose 6.9 percent to 557.2 billion yen from about 511 billion yen a Mitsubishi said it expects its full-year profit to fall 28.9 percent from the level of a year earlier on a 10.2-percent revenue rise.

Frankfurt Bourse President Elected

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — Karl-Oskar Koenigs, a partner in the private West German banking house B. Metzler Seel. Sohn & Co., has been elected president of the Frankfurt Stock Exchange, a bourse spokesman said Monday. He succeeds Ferdinand von Galen, senior partner of Schröder, Münchmeyer, Hengst & Co., who resigned from the stock exchange position earlier this month after his bank had to be rescued by other banks. Mr. Koenigs had been bourse president for 14 years before being replaced by Mr. von Galen in 1982.

Keuter to Seek Advice on Stock Sale

LONDON (Reuters) - The trustees of Reuter will seek independent legal advice about a possible capital reconstruction and sale of stock in the company, Angus McLachlan, chairman of the trustees, said Monday. Mr. McLachlan said the trustees have been informed of the general concept of such actions, "but we are still awaiting its details." He said it has been wrongly implied that because the 10 trustees had all been nominated by newspaper companies "that we shall rubber-stamp anything that is formally proposed by the board."

Since 1941 Reuter has been a company that has been barred by its owners — associations of British, Irish, Australian and New Zealand newspapers - from selling stock to outsiders. But last week the Reuter board said it has been advised by its lawyers that the Reuter trust agreement can be terminated by unanimous decision of the owners without reference to outsiders. That view, however, has been questioned.

$6.5-Billion Loan Package For Brazil Seems Assured

. To do that, they asserted, the root cause of Brazil's cash-flow problems - high rates of interest which have poshed Brazil's interest payments beyond its ability to service them - would have to be addressed. The banking sources added that steps to correct that problem should be taken before Brazil returns for additional money in what is likely to be the next six to eight months.

The emergence of a drive to formulate a longer-term strategy through a sharp reduction in interest rates diverges from the current strategy, which is directed at Brazil's immediate financing requirements. According to this strategy, once the country's short-term problems have been addressed, confidence about the country's prospects will return and Brazil will be able to raise capital on its own.

That sort of an approach appears to be working in Mexico, which has much short-term debt. But bankers are becoming increasingly con-vinced that it should not be applied

Norwegians Prepare Plan to Help Russia Develop Offshore Oil

By Henry Henriksen

OSLO - Seven Norwegian oil companies has worked out a plan for the Soviet Union to develop oil and gas fields on its part of conti-

China Is Hoping to Tap World's Wine Markets

By Christopher S. Wren New York Times Service

TIANJIN, China — Experts may view it as a naive Chinese muscatel, but Dynasty medium-dry white wine heralds China's emergence into the competitive world of budget-priced wines. The wine was produced by a joint venture of the Chinese and Remy

Martin Ltd. of France in the flat countryside about 10 miles (16 kilometers) north of this industrial city. The 190,000 or so bottles produced this year have already sold out, with 90 percent of the batch exported to Southeast Asia, Australia, the United States and Western Europe. Nearly 17,000 bottles were consigned last month to a wine importer in New York. And Guillanme d'Avont, the managing director of Remy Martin's operations in Asia, said last spring that Dynasty was being introduced this year to the discriminating French market. The wine, which possesses a light body, delicate bouquet and fruity taste remainscent of a Moselle of West Germany, is sold in China shrough hotels and stores that eather to foreign townicin A bortle in Beijing costs a little more than $4.

Remy Martin's participation was welcomed because the Chinese have virtually no tradition of grape wine. The wine celebrated in classical Chinese poetry is concocted of sterner stuff, such as sorghum or rice, and can pack a wolka-like wallop.

At meals, the Chinese generally prafer beer, which the Germans introduced here in the 19th century. The wine produced for domestic consumption tastes mostly like fruit syrup.

"Chinese people prefer a sweet wine — they don't care for a medium-dry wine that has no sugar in it," said Liu Baosheng, head of production at the Dynasty winery.

But the Chinese have detected a lucrative market for wine in the party.

But the Chinese have detected a lucrative market for wine in the rest. of the world. Dynasty made a respectable international debut at a wine exhibition in Bordeaux, France, in June 1981. In London last month, another wine — a dry white called Great Wall, from Shacheng, 80 miles southwest of Beijing — won China's first silver medal

Grapes have flourished in the fertile soil and hot, summy summers of the Tianjim region, which lies at the same latitude as Spain or southern Italy. The first muscat vines were introduced by Marshall Nie Rongshen of the Chimese Army when he returned from a visit to Bulgaria in

Under an agreement reached in February 1980, Remy Martin supplied the equipment and skills for the winemaking venture ourside Tranjin, while the Chinese provided an old commune and labor and, of course, the grapes. A total investment of more than $2.4 million at current exchange rates was envisioned, with the French side assuming A misunderstanding over quality occurred at the start of produc-A misunderstanding over quanty occurred at the start of produc-tion in August 1980. Local peasants, figuring that a grape was a grape, complained when the French rejected half of what they delivered. Mr. Liu, the head of production, agreed with the French, "The fundamental factor is the quality of the grapes," he said. "You can't make good wine without good grapes." He said the simation had improved since the farmers were taught about such requirements as high sugar content.

Now, he said, "We reject very few because we warn them about the standards we require for the purchase of grapes. Because the standards are set beforehand, they have nothing to say. They must take the Liu Baosheng, head of production at Dynasty winery.

The peasants responded after the winery began paying slightly higher prices for top-quality grapes. Mr. Liu said the 300 metric tons of grapes delivered this year were better than last year's offering. The winery buys its grapes from four communes outside Tianjin and

The venture has also had to battle bureaucratic red tape in Tianjin Xu Wenheng, the general manager, complained earlier this year that "three days or even a week can be wasted on shoving the paper around" to get a single export permit.

The winery, an assortment of drab brick and concrete sheds enlivened by a few elegant willow trees, has 24 employees, more than a comparable Western operation but fewer than the Chinese initially demanded. A French couple is in residence as foreign wine experts. Mr. Xu also helps with the tasting

Fermentation takes about 10 days in large vats made of Japanese stainless steel. The total process from vine to bottle lasts 100 days, Mr. Lin said. No effort is made to label vintages. Those who prefer full-bodied wines may find Dynasty a bit thin, but Mr. Lin said the factory has sought to maintain an alcohol content of about 11 percent.

To keep workers employed in the slack winter months, the winery also makes five kinds of medicinal herbal wines, which are exported mostly to communities of overseas Chinese in Singapore or Malaysia. The winery has imported prepackaged wine bottles, first from Australia and now from France, because local bottles are too flimsy to withstand travel and are too dirty. "The bottles in China are brough in in sacks and have to be cleaned and sterilized, so there is a lot of work to do," said Mr. Liu.

Westinghouse's Unit in Spain Finds It Hard to Cope With Madrid's Rules

By Nina Darnton New York Times Service

MADRID - A decision by Westinghouse S.A., a subsidiary of Westinghouse Electric Corp., to stop spending while it reorganizes under the Spanish equivalent of bankruptcy law illustrates the difficulties that businesses can have operating under tight government controls in a depressed contony.

In addition, the company was damaged by the new government's austerity policies, which include drastic cuts in spending. The government, for example, has recent approved the cancellanem of five nuclear-power plants whose electri-cal equipment was to have been provided by Westinghouse.

The austerity program, caused by Spain's growing economic crisis and its desire to streamline its industry to make it competitive for entry into the European Community, has also resulted in a reconsideration of expansion plans for the national railways. Why your best investment could be reinvestment.

Good news from Union Investment

If you are an investor in UNI-FONDS, a leading mutual fund in German securities, we have good news for you. Starting November 15, 1983, profits covering the fiscal year ending September 30, 1983, are being distributed at the rate of DM 1.00 per unit on coupons No.28.

The case for reinvesting

This could be a very attractive time to reinvest your profit distri-bution in UNIFONDS. Over the years - even in trying periods - the fund has performed well for international investors seeking sound. long-term growth and diversification. And recent events in Germany should help boost prospects for even better performance in the future. New UNIFONDS shares can be purchased through January 31, 1984 at a considerable discount on the issue price within the profit distribution program.

UNIFONDS at work

Established in 1956 as one of West Germany's first investment funds, UNIFONDS is structured to achieve long-term capital growth and adequate return. Managed by an experienced team of investment professionals, the portfolio emphasizes shares in promising German industries.

UNIFONDS shares can be pur-chased or sold at any time through your bank or broker. They are also available from any German bank. Prices are quoted daily in the International Herald Tribune and Financial Times.

For complete information on UNIFONDS, please contact an agent/ partner or write to Union-Investment-Gesellschaft mbH, P.O. Box 16767, 6000 Frankfurt/Main 16, West Germany

OLETTE is a kind of corsetière of love.

This most French of all French writers.

who died in 1954, tells us how love sometimes binds and keeps a woman from breathing freely or how it may shape and support her and help her to be beautiful. Her women seem to be perpetually debating with themselves about love. Is it worth surrendering one's "proud loneliness," one's "luxurious errors"? Which is worse: solitude or togetherness?

In one of these "Collected Stories of Co-lette," a married woman asks herself, "What is this man doing in my home with me?" A husband is like a bull in a china shop or a boudoir. Marriage, or a love affair, is an interminable series of stratagems directed against boredom. Every woman in love seems at the same time to dread and desire the dissolution

Colette's women work hard at loving. One married woman meets her husband's former wife and is haunted by the fact that the man who satisfies her did not sufficiently please this other woman, who left him. She wonders whether the first wife is superior in her demands, or whether her husband has failings she

Another wife, still on her honeymoon, notices what strong, ugly hands her husband has, hands hardly suited for tender caresses or fastening the clasp of a necklace. How, she wonders, can she love these hands for which she must always be, in a sense, a clumsy parcel?

and passion for men. A woman must select so carefully the aspects of herself that she exposes to a man. Men have so little patience with imperfection, so little understanding of the constant maintenance it takes to be always attractive, always chic, always amusing. For

Colette, to be a woman in love is to practice

Like André Gide, Colette is as much a French institution as a writer. One thinks of her as the female voice of Paris. Many of these stories are vignettes, like shop windows displaying one or two articles. It's as if all the consessions of Paris were cut away and we

The Cowboys, one of the most successful franchises in the NFL. are for sale under certain condi-tions, team President Tex Schramm said Monday, The Associated Press reported from Dallas.

The stipulations include continuing to allow coach Tom Landry and Schramm to have a free rein in running the club on the field and in the front office.

Clint W. Murchison Jr., 60, chairman of the board, is afflicted with a condition that affects his speech and belance, and Schramm said Murchison "wants to get everything in order. And he's not going to let anyone buy it who will move the team."

Schramm refused to put a price tag on the 24-year-old franchise and said there's no rush to sell it. The Dallas Times Herald has reported that Murchison has held preliminary discussions with at least twn parties interested in buy-ing the Cowboys for a price ranging between $50 million and $60 mil-

Christin Cooper Is Set for One Final Run

This Return From an Injury Will Be Her Last Season of Competitive Skiing

By Peter Alfano

and the second second New York Times Service to - . Garage NEW YORK - Most of the men and women who spend their. youth husting down the sides of OMES! snow-packed mountains on a pair of thin flat boards are resigned to the fact that the time will come when they will be fitted for a plaster-of-paris cast and have various parts of their bodies held together with items that can be purchased in a hardware store.

For instance, there is a screw holding her ankle together, Chris-tin Cooper said matter-of-factly about a broken ankle she suffered earlier in her skiing career. As for her most recent injury, which sidelimed her at a time when she was reaching her own summit as an Alpine skier, Cooper brushed off my talk of disappointment like so many flakes of snow.

A needed break from skiing, is how she described the enforced layoff that was a result of a compression fracture of the tibia that she suffered last January during downhill training in Switzerland. "When you're competing, you move around so fast from place to place that your life is like a tunnel," she said recently. You don't have time for whimsical thoughts. What's more, after a disappointing showing in the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, the U.S. men and women have rebounded to become a force in international skiing the last three years. Phil Mahre has won the men's overall World Cup title three consecutive times, and Bill Koch was the 1982 World Cup Nordic champion, which encompasses cross-country skiing and ski-jumping. Then Mo-

Not knowing what to make of the idea, I discussed the proposal with Humberto Cortez, a New Yor!; taxi driver, who was trying to take me crosstown on 37th Street the other day. Correz said he lived in the South Bronx, and white he thought it might improve the morale of people commuting from Westport and Greeowich every day, he didn't believe it would change the lives of those who lived in the area.

Every four years all the presidenual candidates visit the South Bronx with televisioo crews, and each one announces the first thing he will do if he is elected is rebuild the neighborhood. Then, if be gets in office, he gives the mooey to El Salvador,

A SON CONTINUOUS RECENTION 1

"Yup. After the next election we should invite Castro to build a 10,000-foot airplane runway in the South Bronx."

"Are you crazy?" I shouted in gridlock. "Castro would send in soldiers disguised as a send in port Marxist revolution. The South couldn't stand for that."

"That's the idea. No president could allow it. So he would send in the U.S. Marines and the 82d Airborne to stop the construction." "But that could mean war."

"The South Bronx looks like a war zone now. How much more damage could the Marines do?"

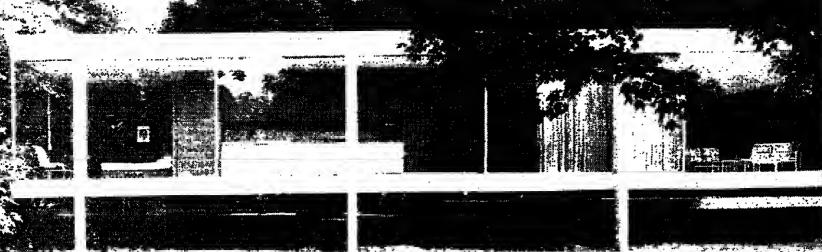

"All right, so the United States invades the South Bronx. How does that help you?

"After the fighting stops, the Americans will have to ship the Cuban workers back to Havana and then the Bronx will become a United States problem. The Americans will have to send in army engi-neers and AID officials to help us get on our feet. The president will go to Congress and ask for millions of dollars to keep the borough from falling into the communist camp. He could make the Bronx the showcase of the Western Hemisphere. and persuade everyone the United States will really help those who turn their backs on Castro."

We got into another gridlock oo Fifth Avenue, "Mr. Cortez, you make a very good case, but it's hard to believe that any presideot would get excited about Castro's plans for the South Bronx. The U.S. government wrote off your borough long

"They might ignore our borough politically, but they can't afford to overlook the 10,000-foot runway. You doo't think we're going to build it to attract tourists to the South Bronx do you?" "It's the wildest idea I've ever heard of," I said. Mr. Cortez replied, "It isn't half as crazy as covering up a city's urban decay with a hunch of phony viny fronts."

The 1950 Farnsworth House, designed by Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, is now owned by the London developer, Peter Palumbo.

A Rare Look at Mies's 'Floating' House

By Paula Deitz New York Times Service

F OR Peter Palumbo, a 48-year-old London property developer, an important event in his education came one Sun-day morning in 1952. His Eton housemaster gave a seminar on the architect Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, and the first photograph shown was of the oewly completed Farnsworth House, Mies's "floating" glass-and-steel structure in Plano, Illinois, 55 miles southwest of Chicago.

"It was a great moment," Palumbo recalls more than 30 years later, "I was knocked out hy that house."

That early commitment to the work of Mies van der Rohe has developed into a lifetime involvement. Today Palumbo is the owner of the Farnsworth House, and he plans to begin construction in 1986 of a controversial glass-and-bronze-sheathed 22-story office building in London that he commissioned Mies to design in 1962.

The International-style house — considered one of the landmarks of 20th-century American domesue architecture - was built in 1950 for weekend use by the architect's close friend Dr. Edith Farnsworth. It was one of a series of buildings using industrial materials that Mies designed when he was the director of architectural studies at the Illinois Institute of Technology from 1938 to 1958. It is at the font of a sloping meadow amid 60 acres of Illinois prairie on the banks of the meandering Fox River.

The house is a glass pavilion 77 feet long and 29 wide, It is raised 5 feet above ground on eight evenly spaced structural steel columns, like elassical colonnades, that allow the river's spring overflow to pass beneath the house. On these occasions the house looks like a houseboat, and the aging black sugar maple that determined for his redevelopment plan and building the Mies's siting, have become the real visual foundaries enclosing the transparent don's financial district, has been one of house. "On a windy night," Palumbo says, "I can hear the sounds of the branches caressing the glass."

The open-plan interior of the Farns-worth House is defined by a long off-center service core finished in primavera wood. A wide living room space on the fireplace side of the core opposes a long narrow built-in kitchen on the other side. The bathrooms are at either end of the core, and the main sleeping area faces east, to view the sunrise.

Mies, it is reported, was planning to design furniture for the house before his relationship with Farnsworth came to an acrimonious end with lawsuits over costs ($75,000 for the house instead of $65,000).

Palumbo has furnished the house with Mies-designed furniture. A couch in brown leather dates from Palumbo's sojourn in a New York apartment; it is accompanied by several of Mies's tuhular steel and flat steel bar Tugendhat and Brno chairs and his glass-and-steel "X" coffee table. The ottomans are the leather and steel designs Mies originally created for the International Exposition of 1929 at Barcelona.

Palumbo, a keen gardener, rehabilitated the landscape with the advice of the late Lanning Roper, an American-born land-with Philip C, Johnson.

The first step began in 1958. Palumbo, who had joined City Acre Property Investment Trust, owned by his father, after graduating from Oxford, bought a five-story Victorian office building near the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor's residence. In the last 25 years, he has spent many millions in acquiring other properties and leases in the area.

"At first our motive was for property investment," Palumbo said. "But by 1962 the plan emerged for a potential redevelopment with an important office building at its center."

Paiumbo wrote Miss, who had never designed a structure in England, inviting him to design the office building. The ar-chitect cabled his assent, and even knowing that the building could not be started until 1986, when the remaining leases terminated, he produced the design. He signed a full set of working drawings two weeks before he died in August 1969. The 290-foot-high building was envisioned as an elegant bronze-clad shaft with bronze-tinted glass,

The 1.25-acre site - to be called Mansion House Square — was planned by Palumbo and the architect to be bounded by existing buildings of exceptional architectural merit. Among those are Sir Chris-topher Wren's 1679 Church of St. Stephen Walbrook and Sir Edwin Lutyens's 1939 facade for the Midland Bank.

The proposed redevelopment will be contested at a public inquiry in May 1984.
Although the plan received preliminary permission in 1969, recent objections have been raised by those who would preserve the half of the preserve the preser the shells of some 19th-century buildings

Others reacting against London's new crop of bland office towers generally op-pose Mics's 16-year-old modernist design. But Palumbo does have the support of such prominent British architects as James Stir-ling, Norman Foster and Richard Rogers.

When not at his country house in Ascot. Palumbo, who is divorced, lives near his office in a skylighted garret on the future building's site. He commutes several times a year to the Farnsworth House, sometimes accompanied by his three children. And for one of his children, at least, the concern with Mies's architecture continues.

When Palumbo's son, James applied to Oxford in 1981, he wrote an essay about the Farnsworth House as an entry require-ment. Describing the ferocity of Middle Western thunderstorms at the house, with lightning flashing and sheets of rain pouring down the glass walls, he wrote, "The house's transparency points toward an es-sential insecurity."

"Disagree," his father wrote in as a mar-ginal note, "In an electrical storm, for example we claim affinity to the lotus flower, which has the ability to sit in water and never get wet - a philosophical concept of which the Farnsworth House is the perfect embodiment,"

The cause of the fire was unknown, but firement said it was believed to have started in immey.

Halfway through the biblical three score years and 10. Prince Charles celebrated his 35th birthday Monday to pacans of praise from editorialists, a barrage of advice from medical men and the prodiction he'll be a father the second time around in 1984. The Daily Mail columnist Nigel Dempster wrote that Charles and his wife, 22-year-old Diana, "are hoping for another baby in 1984 and news of her pregnancy is the birthday present that the princess has been hoping to give her husband." Friends expect them to have three children fairly evenly spaced, Dempster re-ported. There was a flood of specilation last September that Dians was expecting the couple's second child, after newspaper reports that she slipped away from the royal family's holiday retreat at Balmoni Castle in Scotland for a secret visit to her gynecologist in London. Buckingham Palace has refused to confirm or deny the reports.
